Business is Building at CONSTRUCT2010 and The TFM Show

Dallas, Texas, September 1, 2009 With over half of the show floor already committed, CONSTRUCT2010, in conjunction with the 54th CSI Annual Convention and co-located with The TFM Show, a senior executive facilities management show, are building business. Exhibitors are currently securing space for their participation in this May 2010 event at the Pennsylvania Convention Center, Philadelphia, PA. Show management has issued a reminder that the deadline, to qualify for the discounted rate and priority space draw of Thursday, September 10th, is just ten days away.

Those that participate in CONSTRUCT2010 and The TFM Show, get direct access to decision-makers with billion dollar purchasing power. Thousands of architects, engineers, contractors, specifiers, facility managers and other key professionals will be looking for new products, innovative solutions and the latest in technology for the institutional, industrial and commercial building industry.

Most of the show's floor and prime exhibit space will be sold during this initial Space Assignment process. Exhibitors have been quick to go online to select their top booth location choices in order to complete their contract application. "This is the best time to commit to the event and secure the best placement on the show floor, receive the discounted space rates and choose a sponsorship," notes Jayne Dalton, Show Manager.

CONSTRUCT2010, co-located with The TFM Show, are both owned and produced by Hanley Wood. The event will take place May 12-14 at the Pennsylvania Convention Center, Philadelphia, in conjunction with the 54th CSI Annual Convention. Online Attendee registration opens mid-January, 2010.
