Philadelphia, PA Wins the 2010 Nod

Dallas, TX, June 3, 2009 CONSTRUCT2009 and The TFM Show have announced the dates and venue for their 2010 co-located event. In conjunction with the 54th CSI Annual Convention, the two shows will be held side-by-side at the Pennsylvania Convention Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 11-14, 2010. Tom Cindric, Director, Hanley Wood Exhibitions, states, "We look forward to hosting our event in Philly, where we found ideal amenities to support our attendees and exhibitors."

"There is a strong attendee base in this area that has easy access from Washington DC, New York and Boston via train," Jayne Dalton, Show Manager notes, "and over 40% of the U.S. population is within driving distance."

In addition to its communal location and abundance of services, Philadelphia offers a diverse range of architecture from the 1870s to the present. An easy walk around downtown and you'll see the spectacular Victorian interior of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts; the soaring central court of Philadelphia's first department store, Wanamakers; and the atrium of the brand new Comcast Center, Philadelphia's tallest skyscraper. The city provides a strong base for the development of technical tours, programs and special events.

The Exhibits will span three days, May 12-14, and the Education will be held over four days, May 11-14, 2010. This key industry event encompasses the planning, design, engineering, specifying, construction, renovation and operation within the commercial building industry. CONSTRUCT and The TFM Show offer the latest products and solutions to architects, engineers, facility managers/owners, specifiers, designers, general contractors and all building professionals. CONSTRUCT2010 and The TFM Show will again offer two accredited education programs, expanded networking, special activities, a full exhibit hall floor and CSI member events which will attract attendees from all over the world.
